Dear Welo Data hiring team,

I'm applying for the Hydrus Session Director role. My background combines instructional design at ASU, original recorded lessons for Coursera, an Electronic Media degree and live group facilitation. The connection I see is practical: help people understand the task, give them a clear next instruction and notice when the process needs a pause or correction.

For Coursera, I created ChatGPT 4o for Beginners: Create Social Media Content, including original demonstrations and revised quiz content. Each lesson gives the learner something specific to try and inspect. At ASU, I developed learning materials and workshops and evaluated voice and chat flows. That work has made me attentive to how instructions are interpreted and how a small change in wording can change what someone does next.

I also run paid and community tabletop role-playing sessions for mixed-experience groups, online and in person. Preparing a three- or four-hour session means giving beginners enough structure to participate while leaving room for a natural conversation. My portfolio pairs that facilitation background with concrete teaching artifacts and product designs that distinguish an interrupted answer from a lost connection.

For Hydrus, I would use calibration to learn your recording requirements, coaching style and escalation process. During a session, I would give focused feedback, check the relevant requirement before asking for a repeat, and record issues clearly for the team. I'm based in Mesa, authorized to work in the United States without sponsorship and available to start as soon as possible. I would welcome a conversation about the session schedule and the technical setup you use.

Thank you,
Kyle Hobson
